to the ground it to appearance lifted it and turned it part round before it fell it broke the boards and timber and carrying a part of it off so as it is impossible to rebuild it again it took my sap buckets 40 or 60 of them and some hemlock bark to play with the buckets as they some that they were men's rails but I trust they have gone where there is more chance for maples for it took about all of mine up by the roots and it went east increasing its fury the whirl being about 60 or 70 rods wide remaining from 10 to 100 rods as much as two men can lift it took the bottom sticks from log fence from their foundation tearing out bunches ^{of bushes} by the roots and throwing stone heaps and pulling up stumps where the grass that is unmowed ~~grass~~ to which it about round thence across south by A G Manser tearing the forest down a strip from 75 to 100 rods wide it increasing its fury it tore down A G moon of this new yoke fence built this with a 2 1/2 inch auger from 75 to 100 rods at it coming some of the bottom sticks 100 rods that took 4 of us to carry them had the next day it hove a black ash out into the of John Gilman's at the side of a flour mill upwards forty feet long tearing fences stumps stones passing its fury along to Bear Brook by
